

The Consumer Bankers Association has chosen to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. They are attempting to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers.

If successful, anybody that I currently have a business relationship with (e.g., bank, credit card company, long distance carrier) will be able to call me as often as they want. They are wrong. They send enough junk mail that needs to be thrown away. I do NOT want to receive calls from these people unless it is an emergency that affects my account (stollen card, etc.). I enjoy a peaceful home without the calls I used to receive and want to keep it that way. Thank You.
